Jesus' Own Mother

Lesson for January 5, 1964

Jesus is the hero of the New Testament. Other characters meet us in its pages, but no writer in the New Testament takes an interest in anyone else except as they have some connection with the life of Jesus himself. So Mary, his own mother, appears in the Bible not as Queen of Heaven or the Co-Redemptrix of the world, but as the simple, good young woman who was the wife of a village carpenter and the mother of Jesus of Nazareth. We should like to know more about her than we do. She was probably not quite young, and also probably not given what we would call a high-class education. Yet we know that when was the woman to whom God entrusted Jesus. The church through most of its history has believed that Joseph was not the real father of Jesus; but the church has never thought of denying that Mary was his real mother.

Mary Pondering

Mary was a remembering woman. She thought long about the meaning of things that is what "pondered" means. She took time for events to make their impression on her mind. We know she was a woman of poetic mind. Most of the words attributed to her are in poems, presumably made up, perhaps on the spur of the minute. She was familiar with that great poetry collection and hymn book of her people which we know as the Book of Psalms. She was a woman who loved those Psalms and memorized them and wove them into the fabric of her own mind and memory. She remembered the singing angels, and the angel who first visited her and the coming of the Magi. She remembers her son as a small boy, and that notable trip to Jerusalem when he was 12 years old. She was not a woman to go talking all the time with her neighbors. She did not wear her heart on her sleeve. She was not one to live only on the surface of things. She was no doubt a busy and often weary woman. But still she had time to furnish an inner chamber of the heart, a secret world where the wonders of life were cherished and re-lived.

Mary Commanding

Jesus as a boy was not given special privileges except no doubt those of any oldest son. One special privilege he did not have: he was not allowed to disobey. We read that he "was subject" to his parents, that is, they directed him, gave him commands. Perhaps the burden of this fell on Mary, for Joseph drops out of the picture and is not heard from in the story after that visit to Jerusalem. Mary was what the poet describes. "A perfect woman, nobly planned, To warn, to comfort and command."

In the story John tells of the wedding at Cana, we hear Mary commanding the servants to do whatever her son directed. This was a turning point in her life, perhaps. At any rate, somewhere along the road Mary knew the moment which comes to every mother, no matter how loving and good, when she has to let go her control, when her child looks at her with level eyes, the child no longer a boy, a youth, but a man.

Mary Praying

The last picture we have of Mary in the New Testament story is in a prayer meeting. It was in an "upper room," perhaps the very room in which Jesus taught or practiced anything but love. Love the lovely, the unlovely, the rich, the poor, the learned the unlearned — all peoples of all races and creeds. Love "fulfills" the requirements of the law. Thinking on the laws of love will give a much better environment out of which to practice this virtue in all areas and levels of life.

Then it would be most advantageous to us if we would resolve to make Christian worship a vital part of 1964. I mean worship God in His Church. I read not just attendance of some Sunday School class or study group, but one full participation of Christian Worship. The church school, and study groups are good supplements, or preliminary preparations, but they never should be taken as substitutes for Christian Worship. It's what we feel in worship as much as what some minister of the gospel might say that adds to growth in our relationship to God.

Too, make plans to learn more through some time of Bible Study and Daily prayer. I am convinced that the average person needs is guidance. And I firmly believe that if we would consult the Log Book more, the Bible — we would find the experience worship to move across the years. There are insights and clear paths of the Way if only we will take time to find them. The Bible is a book to aid us in building spiritual character. It takes diligent study to learn these paths.

Begin the New Year with the Lord of your life. Forget, so far as possible, the past, and keep an pressing on towards the goals of life found in Christ Jesus our Lord! The New Year offers new dimensions of love and life. Be in the church of your choice the very first Sunday of the new year, and make it a family affair.
